TO-DAY'S POLICE. (Before Mr May.)-The forecious deg belonging to Mr Tidd (Masses Bowrs & Co.) cost that gentleman an additional 20 shillings this morning, for having bitten a Chinese small boy. This appears to have happened, in spite of the dog having been loosely muzzled; and his Worship remarked that the dog seemed likely to be an expensive one for his master.

WHE GENTLEMEN MEET COMPLIMENTS Pass."-J. Collago, formerly clerk to the Gas Company, but now a clerk unemployed appeared this morning to complain agains person named Ullmann (who carries on a miscellaneous business in a shop in Queen's Road), inasmuch as that personage had made use of language calculated to provoke a breach of the peace. Collago (on solemn oath) stated that Ullmann had hailed him on the street, "dunned" him, and upon an explanation of want of employment having been given, then swore at him and openly asserted that his origin had something to do with a female dog. This latter statement (continued the indignant complainant) ne would call upon the defendant to prove, as he would not be thus insulted by any one. Complainant further stated (in correboration of the above statement) that while Ullmanu sat in Court, he put his hand to his mouth and breathed forth the same calumnious theory as to his ancestry which had previously suggested the summons.— Defendant (with a most benign smirk) repudiated the whole affair. He asked, truly enough, for his money; and further told Collago (in reply to a request for employment) that he would not take him as a clerk on any account, even for $100 a month: but he never "said one bad words." Complainant replied that he (Ullmann) could put him in Gaol if he liked; but defendant responded that such a course was useless to people such as he.-His Worship said he was inclined to believe that the bad language had been used; the proper way to recover money due was by summons, and not by using bad language to a debtor. For the latter he fined Ullmann in the sum of 20 shillings.

named Salleh, belonging to the S.S. Ganges. was charged with having stabbed a seaman named Brown.-John Martin, an umemployed seaman living at Blackwood's boarding-house, stated that he was standing out of the rain about 11 o'clock last night, in a street at the foot of some steps, along with M'Leod and Brown; when the latter went and spoke to a Chinawoman standing near. At this time an Indian came down the steps when Brown told him to get away; shortly after this, Brown came to where they were standing, saying he was stabbed; witness heard something metallic falling on the ground as if thrown; and he saw the Indian run up the steps. Telling M'Leod to secure the man, the witness took Brown to a house and tied his neck, which was spurting blood; and five minutes after M'Leod brought the prisoner.—M'Leod, also a seaman unemployed, deposed to having seen Brown speak to the woman, and prisoner come alongside. When Brown (who was rather drunk) came and said he was wounded, witness saw the prisoner throw 8 knife, and run up the steps; he pursued prisoner, and, never having lost sight of him, caught him. —Inspector Ambrose informed the Magistrate that he sent the wounded man to hospital last night, as he had been bleeding very much; he did not appear to be drunk, nor did the prisoner.—The case was remanded to the 29th.

THE YELLOW RIVER. A Correspondent of the N. C. Hera sends the following interesting letter :-

Circumstances having obliged two friends and myself to spend a few days on the Yellow River, I send you a brief account of our observations. Not because I think they can add much, if anything, to the present knowledge of this important river. but because the subject is one of great interest, and is deservedly attracting to itself considerable attention. Our visit to and sail down the river from Chi-Nafa was quite an unexpected event, and one for which therefore we had made no preparation in any shape. Moreover, had we contemplated the journey, we could not have presumed to attempt any survey of the mouth of the river or its depth in certain parts, and furnish an accurate scientific account for the guidance of merchants and navigators. Our remarks must necessarily be cursory, consisting chiefly of facts gleaned from the natives.

It was on the 15th day of May that we had our first sight of the river, which we approached from the north. Until we were right upon it we could not see any sign of a river, owing to two high rocks intercepting our view from the road we travelled; Passing these rocks we saw a little forest of masts, under shelter of a large town which has been recently fortified with an extensive mid wall. This town is called Loo-Kow, and is really the port of Chi-nan-fu. being only 12 le from that city and from which there is a small river which runs right to the north gate of the city; navigable only for small lighters and other little craft. This new mouth seemed to be a junction effected by the Yellow River with what is marked on the map as the Ta-hsia-ho. Should any number of these channels be opened up, it cannot be be matter of surprise, as the land is quite submerged on the slightest rise of the water. As on no former occasion have I seen any notice of this new mouth, and the Chinese say it was only opened year it might be well if a little attention were given to it by any future travellers, and especially if the proposed survey of the Yellow River by the expedition from Shaughai be carried out. Of the other mouth am not able to speak, but for foreign vessels only it could be of any service.

The following are the words (accord ing to the report in the Recorder), used by the Chief Judge in addressing Mr Tarrant:--I quite agree with the verdict of the jury. You have been guilty of publishing a mischievous libel on the prosecutor, and no honest jury could have acquitted you. is now my duty to pass sentence upon you.

In doing so, I cannot help taking into consideration your position and antecedents. am inclined to think and willing to believe that a long course of self-gratification in the way of abusing the world in general and individuals in particular, has entirely taken from you the power of distinguishing be tween what is abusive and what is complimentary, what is wit and what is sheer stupidity. But the law is humane; its object is more the reformation of the criminal than punishment. cannot say that I am sanguine that any sentence I can pronounce will produce this desirable result in your case. I can but hope it. Perhaps reflection in the solitude of a cell might more surely produce the result, which, in common with myself, the community, and especially I should think your readers, must earnestly desire; but while your offence is grievous, your weakness is also apparent. COCHIN-CHINA. (N. C. Herald.)

It is difficult to realize the fact that, ittle more than a century ago, France was disputing the palm of the colonial supremacy of the world with Great Britain. It is true that at that time the colonial system, now developed into magnificent proportions, was in its infancy. The world itself was then the scene of miserable prejudices and jealousies, the products of its soil in great measure monopolies, its commercial lliberal restrictions. Little more than hundred years ago, the question of the north of the river, having an apparently ultimate possession of British India was still undecided, and the fall of Quebec corner of it and almost half the eastern side, in 1759 was the turning-point of our career in Canada, so that, in the East political and commercial supre-We understand that the French Expediation accompanied as it is by a reasonable to have suffered most fearfully from ravages in the colonial empire of the hat Adam was a child; that he never had claims, which filled whole pages in the tion which has recently arrived found the explanation of why the transference of the made by the water. We are glad to learn that Dr Wells the estate of the bankrupt, that they had desolation to mark its history. The poorer arms, and thus to form an Imperial which does in that time the work spread face, nent, as a rival to that spreading democracy which seems indigenous to the American soil, was an egregious blunder which might well have endangered the position of any statesman who did not rely on the power of his legions. After these failures, it is refreshing to fall in with something which promises success. The French have undoubtedly made their position good in Cochin China, and the annexation of the three southern provinces in June of last year, at comparatively little trouble and expense, considerably strengthened their hold on the whole territory, and has enlarged the sphere of their operations. Yet this important step has been received in France with little interest or enthusiasm; does not come in contact with the national interests at any vital point. produced any article largely in demand in France, or for which French ports could constitute the market for the supply of Europe, then in the intimate relations or direct commerce, the French nation would find a tie binding them to Cochin China. But the case is far otherwise. The main product is rice, and this chiefly for export to China through the port of Saigon, so that the sole interest France has in Cochin China is administrative; if we except the fact of the importance of a military and far as the eye could see, deliciously soft, station, and the political prestige which is derived from the occupation of foreign | nothing on earth could prevent their being territory and the Government of a few: millions of Oriental semi-barbarians, Yet, although the interests of the French people are only remotely connected with this Eastern dependency, French rule man of 400 years. How would one end of will no doubt be a vast benefit Cochin Chinese. It comes to replace an antiquated and enfeebled despotism, to organise and protect a degraded and oppressed people, to develope the producing and consuming capacities of three millions of agriculturists. The condition of things which they have inherited, is the oft-told tale of Asiatic oppression and venulity, and the French have now before them the task, similar to our own in India, of endeavouring to civilize an Oriental nation. The comparatively small number of individuals under their sway will greatly facilitate enlightening agencies; but even with this advantage. we doubt if the utmost efforts will produce anything approaching a commen-surate result. The French have already found the Cochin Chinese, and the almost incredi ble tenacity with which they cling to their antiquated ideas. They have done their best to put an end to the venslity of the official classes, but they appreciate the difficulty of completely eradicating this all-pervading vice of the East, condoned as it is on all hands by the millions who are the victims of it. Since the French have entered into possession of Cochin China, they have inaugurated many enlightened reforms, and have lessened the taxes. The land taxes continue to be paid in kind, and those who have no lands have to give to the state four days labour on the public works, every month. Formerly one man in seven was chosen for the militia, long which he founded under a charter oband fed, clothed, and paid at the ex- tained from Charles II., the incidents of pense of the village to which he be- his life, including his experiences in Boslonged; but it was changed to one ton of which he says: "I did there shed man in fourteen, and subsequently to my blood." one in twenty-one. Another important step was the abolition of the barbarous punishments of the Anamite code, and the introduction of a more humane system a place. The progress of Cochin-China has therefore been steady, and possesses very promising prospects for the future. One of the most encouraging circumstances for the French, is the immigration of large bodies of frugal and industrious Chinese, the most valuable laborers of all oriental nations. But as they learned, there were many reasons why human life should be dimirished in its scope.

We are accustomed to speak of death as a misfortune : we almost never reflect that has | dying is a great benefit. The most of men get through when they are 60 or 70 years of age. They get through; there is nothing more for them to do. And although they do not want to die, there is no conceivable reason in most instances, why they should live. They cumber the ground Here and there is an exceptional case. The If it | beauty of a ripe old age is the very thing that puts to shame an ordinary old ageuseless, cumbrous.

For many other reasons it would be unfortunate if men lived, in the full possession of their powers to exceeding great age. Suppose that some men in New York, whose names are familiar, who have the power of making and amassing money and property, and who wield the great administrative influence which accompanies great wealth; suppose that they, instead of passing away in a few years, and making room for others, should live 500 years, already having scores of millions in their hands, and already wielding a mighty influence through their wealth and experience, despotic in the commercial world. What a disparity would there be? If, with the tone and temper of modern manhood men lived 500 years, what chance would there be for the man of 50 to cope with a society, the upper end, by its position, by its knowledge, by its wealth-if these are held selfishly or despotically—weigh down and oppress the other side! There was a divine mercy manifested in the measurement of the duration of human life in this respect; so that a man lives long enough to develop his forces and to accomplish a certain amount, but not long enough to use that accomplishment as a means of obstruction to others, or as a means of despotism. When men, therefore, are wicked, and are holding high sway, we comfort ourselves by saying, "Well, they can't live for ever! And they cannot. The shortening of human life, and the dying of men in this economy of life, is very often the best event of their lives. Even of men that are quite useful, it is their duty to die; and when they die, they frequently, as Sampson did, accomplish a great work of deliverance. In life they have done, it may be, very much of good or evil; now let them take themselves out of the way, and they will Western ideas are assimilated by the do something more. When a great tree is cut down in the forest, you will see that around it are the twenty trees that had been overshadowed and had no chance to get the sun, all now begin to lift their tops up, and drink at the fountain of life. and start up. Now that the old umbrageous monarch is gone, there is a chance for many more. So there are many consolations in the death of men-if the right ones only

THE BHAMO EXPEDITION.—The latest intelligence from the Bhamo explorers is dated 16th March. Here they remained until an answer was received to a letter which Captain Sladen had addressed to the Panthay authorities at Momein. When our nitelligence left an answer had just been received, and its tenour surpassed even the most favourable expectations. The Panthay chiefs expressed themselves most anxious for the arrival of the party in Yunan, and the explorers will doubtless push on without delay for Momein, where Captain Sladen's diplomacy has we think insured them a hearty reception. Those for calculating the prices of tea in dollars or pence have been copied from the more extended tables, by the kind permission of the author, P. Loureiro, Esq. The last section of the same chapter, on "Movements in Bullion," has been prepared and furnished for the Guide by Patrick R. Harper, Esq., of the Commercial Bank of India at Hongkong, who has had much experience in the exchanges and movements of the precious metals in Eastern Asia.

"The Appendix of Sailing Directions has been reprinted from the 'China Pilot.' With short interruptions, the coasts from Singapore to Hakodadi are all described in it; and for the Chinese coasts, the Directions have been improved by the insertion of the Chinese characters for the names of all places that could be ascertained."
